compass manual

Responding to new challenges posed to human rights is a permanent challenge for the Council of Europe. However, human rights cannot be implemented through legal processes alone. Human rights are best respected, protected and appreciated when all of us understand them, stand up for them and apply them in our actions. This is especially relevant to children and young people. Human rights education is in itself a right, enshrined in Article 26 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. The Charter on Education for Democratic Citizenship and Human Rights Education adopted by the Committee of Ministers in 2010 calls upon the member states to provide every person within their territory with the opportunity of education for democratic citizenship and human rights education, by all means of education, including nonformal education. It also recognises the irreplaceable role of nongovernmental organisations and youth organisations in this process. Too many young people look at the future with apprehension and fear instead of confidence. The human rights framework of the Council of Europe provides youth policy and youth work with an ethical and normative ground within which the rights and responsibilities of young people should be addressed. Please upgrade your browser to improve your experience. It also provides youth leaders, teachers, educators, professionals and volunteers with concrete ideas to motivate, engage and involve young people to take action for human rights in their own way, in their own community. There are no readymade solutions to poverty, discrimination, violence or intolerance. It does not contain answers to all questions about human rights either. What the manual does provide is an opportunity for those venturing into human rights education to explore these themes in a manner that is creative, involves young people and is, in itself, human rights education.<http://www.matsonconstruction.net/userfiles/6es7-158-0ad01-0xa0-manual.xml>
